“Whether it’s your first or fifth time dedicating your November to writing, we’re in it together; we applaud you for taking on the challenge,” Sieh said. Sieh and Siniaho had heard about the NaNoWriMo challenge before and wanted to support those in the community interested in trying it. To do this, they have organized three different meetings, or “writing rooms” at the library throughout the month of November. These meetings are open to people of all ages and levels of experience. The first meeting for the writers was Wednesday, Nov. 1 from 6-8 p.m.. The second meeting is planned for Nov. 8 at the same time. There will also be a meeting on Saturday, Nov. 18 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. During these meeting times writers are welcome to come to the Community Room to enjoy some refreshments. There will also be books on writing available for those who want assistance. “We’re going to provide refreshments, have people sign-up for an email thread where we’re going to send encouraging words and have people talk about their word count, and we’re just going to offer a place to write,” Siniaho said. In the Community Room there will also be pens and notebooks for those who need additional tools for writing. Those attending are encouraged to stay in the Community Room or find their own space to write in the library. “People can either have their refreshments there and then go find their happy place in the library to write or they can write right there,” Siniaho said. “The teen room will be open for writing and the children’s room and we’ll have guest passes for the computers for people who don’t have their library cards.” Sieh and Siniaho also hope to host a wrap-up party at the end of the challenge, though the exact date and time for that will be decided upon by the participants in the challenge at a later time. The library has created a group on the NaNoWriMo website <https://nanowrimo.org/>. This group is titled Holyoke Public Library Writer’s Room. Those who are interested can create a free account on NaNoWriMo and join this group to be able to speak with fellow writers and the organizers of the event throughout the writing process. To those wondering if completing NaNoWriMo is truly possible, Siniaho had some words of encouragement. “Many ask if it’s possible to write a book in a month and yes, it really is,” Siniaho said. If you have any questions on how to sign up for NaNoWriMo, feel free to call Siniaho at (413)420-8119 or Sieh at (413)420-8101 for assistance.

These replacements will be crucial for improving the environments of the school buildings. “New windows I can’t say enough about what they do to a school, it makes it feel like a new school,” Superintendent Anthony Soto said. “The windows they have at McMahan are really aging and you can’t see through them, they don’t really let natural light in and with this we’re going to be able to replace all those windows.” This project will be an accelerated repair project under the MSBA and therefore, as explained by City Councilor Joseph McGiverin, qualifies for MSBA to cover up to 80% of the costs of the project. According to the information given to the finance committee, if the MSBA provides the full grant of 80%, the city would pay for $3.2 million of the project. Jourdain pointed out that $3.2 million is 25% of the $12,708,775 total budget, not 20%. Executive Director of Finance for Holyoke Public Schools Sean Mangano explained that the total budget planned contained a 5% contingency. “The total budget includes about a 5% contingency in it and when you see some of the grant numbers they don’t always include the contingency because they want to wait to see what you’re applying for it,” Mangano said. “The good news is that the project number includes a contingency as well so when we bid it out there is potential for it to come out a little bit lower if we don’t use the contingency.” Additionally, the finance committee and Mangano applied for Elementary and Secondary School Emergency Relief funds for this project. They pitched for up to $2 million; therefore the city would potentially only need to pay $1.2 million for these crucial projects. “I got approval from the state to cover half the costs of the city’s share, up to $2 million,” Soto said. Mayor Joshua Garcia is uncertain if the city will use bonds to pay for this project or be able to use other methods. “There are several options available at this point, I haven’t decided one way or another as everything is in the air at this point,” Garcia said. “It may be that we can absorb the costs completely, depending on where things stand.” According to Soto, the project itself is expected to take this summer, so long as they are able to get the materials to begin work right as school gets out. Given this information, the finance committee unanimously supported the appropriation of these costs. “These are really important improvements, I think it’s really going to make a big difference in these schools and we’re going to do it at a very affordable price for taxpayers,” City Councilor Kevin Jourdain said. The recommendation from the finance committee will go to the city council to vote on at their next meeting.
